I have used the sticle as occasion required, and in every case where I have used it. I have found a decided benefit At one time, on going to bed at night, my throat was so sore that I swallowed with difficulty, but by an application of the salve I was relieved tefore

I have used it in case of burns, bruiers sprains, and fi sh cuts, at with the happiest effects, and one case of poisoning by a wild vine in the words, has been dried up and cuted by a few at plications From my own experience, I would strongly re-on-need it to all, as a chesp, convenient, family

I have become so partial to it, that I expect to cep. it constant'y in my family. Though not am' itious to sprear in print, yet I cannot refu-e to have this communication made public if judged best to serve the e use of humani

y. Respectfully there.

SPECIAL MESSAGE Of the President of the U. States in Reference to the French Revolution. The following is the message of President Polk, transmitted on Monday to Congress, apprizing it of the course pursued by Mr. Rush in recognizing the new French Government which the President fully approves: To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States :- I communicate to Congress, for their info mation, a copy of the d spatch, with the accompanying documents, received at the Department of State, from the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States, at Paris, giving official information of the overthrow of the French monarchy, and the establishment, in its stead, of a provisional government based on republican principles. This great event occurred suddenly, and was accomplished almost without bloodshed. The world has soldom witnessed a more interesting or sublime speciacle than the peaceable design of the French people, resolved to secure for themselves enlarged liberty, and to assert, in the majesty of their strength, the great touth that, in this enlightened age, man is capable of governing himself. The prompt recognition of the new government by the representative of the United States at the French Court, meets with my full and unqualified approbation; and he has been authorized, in a suitable manner, to make known this fact to the constitutional authorities of the French Republic, called upon to act upon a sudden emergency, which could not have been aticipated by his instructions. He judged rightly of the feelings and sentiments of his countrymen, when in advance of the diplomatic representatives of other countries, he was the first to recognize, so far as it was in his power, the free government established by the French people. The policy of the United States has ever been that of non-intervention in the domestic affairs of other countries, leaving to each to establish the form of government of its choice. While this policy will be maintained towards France, now suddenly transformed from monarchy into a republic, all our sympathise are naturally enlisted on the side of the great people, who, imitating our example, have resolved to be free. That such sympathy should exist on the part of the world, and especially in France, is not remarkable. We can never forget that France was our early friend in our eventful revolution, and generously aided us in shaking off foreign yoke ank becoming a free and independent people. We have enjoyed the blessings of our system of well regulated selfgovernment for near three-fourths of a century, and can properly appreciate its value. Our ardent and sincere gratulations are extended to the patriotic people of France, upon their noble, and thus far, successful effort to found for their future government liberal institutions similar to our own. It is not doubted that, under the benign influence of free institutions, the enlightened statesmen of republican France will find it to be for her true interest and permanent glory, to cultivate with the United States the most liberal priniples of international intercourse and commercial reciprocity, whereby the happiness and prosperity of both nations will be pro-JAMES K. A Discusting Sight .- A few evenings ago, in Cincinnati, a female, her fingers covered with gold rings, and her body covered with a cloth cloak, was discovered deeping in a stable, and so drunk that she was unable to stand, much less to walk.
